Falkland and its People 1901–1913

Research by Thomas Playfair

Edited by Ross Burgess

With a Foreword by Marietta Crichton Stuart

Hardback, 560 pages, 62 illustrations and 4 maps

ISBN 978-1-9161504-0-9

Our new book covers the full spectrum of life in and around Falkland in the Edwardian era, from the 12-year old twins convicted of breaking into a house to steal a penny and two apples, to the grand civic welcome for the young Laird and his lady taking up residence in the House of Falkland.

Bill Pagan in his review says: “Great credit is due to the author and to the others who assisted in the researches of this fascinating book, and to the author of the Introduction, which sets the context. It is so much more than a town diary, indeed it is a valuable addition to the canon of social history, and deserves to be read far beyond Falkland, Fife, and Scotland.”

Supported by eighteen generous individual sponsors and a grant from the Falkland War Memorial Trust.
